ABSTRACT

Approximately 125 reference materials on women's studies located in the McLennan Library, McGill University (Montreal), are cited in this annotated bibliography. The bibliography serves as an introduction to social science and humanities materials on women. Library of Congress call numbers are included; dates of publication range from the late 19th century to the present. Several publications are written in French. Listings are categorized according to type of material: directories, handbooks, biographies, bibliographies (the major portion), archives, and theses. Subtopics within the categories include women's groups, courses, and regional biographical sources; current, retrospective, international, and regional bibliographies; women and work; women and education; the feminist movement; literature; mass media; and psychology. The large-scale development of women's studies in recent years is attested by the great number of new bibliographies and other reference works which have been produced to provide access to the vast quantity of literature now available. The researcher in the field today is thus fortunate for not only is there a wealth of resources available but also an excellent corpus of reference works to provide guidance and support to research in the field. This bibliography has been compiled as an introduction to the social science and humanities reference materials for women's studies located in the McGill University Libraries. It is selective and should be supplemented by judicious use of the library's subject catalogues.

The heart of the guide is a long section listing bibliographies. It has been divided into subject categories to facilitate browsing. In each subject category are works devoted exclusively to particular topics. You are reminded that these categories are also covered by the comprehensive works listed in the General Bibliographies section (IV.C.1.).

Included in the International Bibliographies section (IV.C.1.c.) is just a small sample of bibliographical resources available on women in foreign countries. When looking for information about women in a particular region or country check the subject catalogues under the headings "Feminism" or "Women" and the appropriate geographical subdivisions provided for respective countries or areas; e.g. WOMEN - AFRICA, NORTH; WOMEN - ARAB COUNTRIES; WOMEN - AUSTRALIA; WOMEN - CARIBBEAN AREA; WOMEN - CHINA; WOMEN - INDIA; WOMEN - LATIN AMERICA; WOMEN - SOUTH ASIA, etc., followed by the form subdivision BIBLIOGRAPHY. Also for quick browsing through the McLennan Reference shelves for such bibliographies look under the call numbers Z7961 and Z7964.

An asterisk (*) below the call number for an entry indicates that the work described should be noted for its Canadian content. In some cases the designated work includes only the occasional Canadian item; in other cases the entire work conveys a Canadian perspective.

Other student's guides prepared by the Reference Department of McLennan Library may be useful to the researcher in women's studies. These guides are available for consultation at the reference desk and personal copies may be purchased at the Copy Service. Those with particular relevance include: Psychology: A Student's Guide to Reference Sources and Sociology: A Student's Guide to Reference Sources

Other Collections in the McGill System

You will find many of the materials required for research in women's studies in the collections of the McLennan and Undergraduate Libraries. The study of women, however, is appropriate to almost any Faculty at the University. For an indepth study of women in specific fields and professions, e.g. art, music, medicine, management, sports, etc., you are advised to also consult the collections of the relevant McGill libraries, e.g. Blackader-Lauterman Library of Architecture and Art, Marvin Duchow Music Library, the Medical Library, Howard Ross Library of Management, and the Physical Education Library.

Only one bibliography on the subject of rape has been included here (Section IV.C.2.h.). Much additional source material is available in the Law and Nursing/Social Work Libraries.

Government publications are essential to almost any inquiry about women. The studies and reports of the Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women, the Canadian Women's Bureau, the U.S. Women's Bureau, and the U.N. Commission on the Status of Women are held by the Government Documents Department, 2nd floor, McLennan Library. As a depository collection for Canadian federal and Quebec provincial governments, the Government Documents Department receives all the publications issued by these governments. It also has a representative collection of publications from other Canadian provinces, other countries and international organizations. The majority of government publications are not listed in the McGill Union Catalogue. You are advised to consult the special catalogues in the Government Documents Department.

This guide does not cover the uncatalogued collection of concise bibliographies in the Vertical File located in the Reference Department of McLennan Library. These bibliographies are received from other North American libraries and documentation centres. Those of interest to women's studies students are filed under the general heading Women and subdivided by topic, e.g. Women - Careers and Employment - Bibliography.

There are several microform research collections relating to women's studies that are available at McGill: (1) Herstory, one of the most comprehensive microfilm collections of journals, newspapers and newsletters on the evolution of modern woman; (2) Women and Law, a microfilm collection of clippings from U.S. newspapers, newsletters, speeches, flyers, research papers, etc. documenting primarily the Women's Rights Movement; and (3) Sexual Politics in Britain, 1975-76, a microfiche collection of papers and documents of British pressure groups and political and social movements. All of these are shelved in the Current Periodicals and Microform Reading Room on the second floor of McLennan Library. They have their own published guides and are also described in Suzanne C. Dodson's Microform Research Collections (Z1033/M5D64/Ref.).

The Women's Union is an organization run by and for the women of McGill. It houses a unique collection of books and periodicals covering a wide range of topics of interest to women. You will find this comfortable niche located in room 423 of the University Centre. To verify the hours, call 392-8920.

Collections Outside McGill

After exhausting the above collections, you might wish to visit the reading room of the Simone de Beauvoir Institute located at 2170 Bishop Street, 3rd floor. The collection of mostly contemporary books, journals and government documents is well organized and available to the McGill community. A documentalist is on hand during service hours to help researchers. Call in advance to verify hours: 879-8521.

Not to be overlooked for research purposes are the numerous women's resource centres in Montreal. Many of these have a good collection of contemporary books and journals. The Information File in the Reference Department of McLennan contains telephone numbers and addresses for some of these centres. A comprehensive list is included in section I.A. of this guide.

Most of the publications listed in this bibliography will be found in the Reference Department of McLennan Library, although some locations in the stacks or in other McGill libraries have been given. Locations for all copies of the works mentioned in this guide have not been listed. Additional locations may be found by checking the McGill Union Catalogue and the microfiche catalogues which supplement it.

If you have any difficulty using this guide or the reference sources listed in it, please do not hesitate to ask for assistance from a reference librarian.

This guide was compiled by Joni Waiser, Reference Department, McLennan Library.

Ballou, Patricia K. Women, a Bibliography of Bibliographies. Boston, G. K. Hall, c1980.
Selective, annotated bibliography of works published between 1970 and 1979. Covers books, parts of a book, pamphlets, journal articles, microforms and ERIC, NTIS and JSAS documents. International in scope but with the exception of French Canadian materials, all are English language publications. Citations are divided into three sections - first section is arranged by type or format e.g. dissertations and library catalogues, second section is arranged by geographic area and the third section, the largest, is arranged by topic. Personal name index only but well organized table of contents makes up for the lack of a subject index. More extensive, more informative and easier to use than the Ritchie and Williamson works.

Emphasis is on the 1970's with the majority of entries dating from 1975 or later. Classified into thirty sections each of which has an explanatory headnote defining its subject and scope. Annotations are not provided for the periodical article entries. Author and title index and a directory of publishers are at the back. Lacks subject index; users must rely on the subject-oriented table of contents.

Interdisciplinary current awareness periodical devoted to ongoing international research projects and new publications about women, sex roles and even men's studies. Now published quarterly. Includes annotated bibliographies, discussions, book reviews, announcements and reports of conferences, descriptions of theses, college courses and academic programs, and a comprehensive periodical and resource guide with updates in each issue. Beginning with 1980, each November issue is the annual "Review" issue in that it is made up almost entirely of lengthy annotated book reviews. A subject index to volumes 1-6 is provided in volume 7; thereafter every volume contains annual author and subject indexes.

Women Studies Abstracts. v.1, no.1, Winter, 1972- Rush, N.Y.

Lib. has: v.1, no.1, 1972-

The basic abstracting and indexing source for women's literature. Emphasis is on periodicals but it covers books as well. Recent volumes contain annotated citations for about 200 articles and unannotated listings for additional articles and book reviews. Abstracts and listings are interspersed and arranged by broad subject e.g. employment, society and government, history and art, media and media reviews, biography and criticism, etc. The section labelled Special Issues and Publications focuses on particular journal issues or sections of journals not normally devoted to the study of women, listing the authors, titles, and page numbers of the articles. Each quarterly issue contains a detailed subject index but no author index. Since entry numbers for the annotated works are followed by the letter "A", one can clearly see from the index whether a particular citation is annotated or not. The annual index includes a list of the abstractors and their affiliation, a list of the periodicals abstracted and indexed, a list of periodicals (with their addresses and subscription rates) that are useful for women studies programs, a name index of authors of works cited in the volume and a cumulated subject index.

* Houle's work is an introductory French language bibliography for the study of women in Quebec. In each of its seven subject sections, there is a list of books, including reports and government documents, followed by a list of relevant periodical articles. The section on literature, an exception, lists French works by Quebec women, arranged by chronological period. A few critical items are cited in the section covering essays. Three additional sections cover biography (arranged as individual or collective biography), French reviews devoted to women, and selected associations mostly located in Montreal. No annotations. Author/title indexes only. Les Québécoises... is intended to supplement Houle, repeating only 8 to 10 percent of the citations listed therein. Unlike Houle, it includes some English language materials. Entries are arranged in broad subject sections. Each section is subsequently divided into two parts; the first lists books, reports and government documents and the second is devoted to journal and newspaper articles. The filmography section describes ca. 50 films about women mostly produced during 1960-1975. No annotations. Author and title indexes.

Emphasis is on French language publications but includes some English works. (When a publication has appeared in both languages, only the French edition is listed.) Covers books and government publications published mainly between 1940 and 1978, though a few earlier classics are included. In each category the citations are listed alphabetically by author in two sequences; the first for works by French Canadian authors and the second for works by other authors, (e.g. from France, Belgium, Switzerland, the U.S.A., etc.). Author index only.

The first volume covers over 100 special issues or sections of periodicals not normally devoted to the study of women. Selection of journal titles was based on their value for research. Most titles are of North American origin. Arranged under 24 subject headings. Complete tables of contents are reproduced for most titles. The second volume supplements and generally keeps the same format as the first volume. It covers about 375 special issues published from 1960 through 1977, with an addendum for issues published before 1960. Index at the back covers both volume 1 and 2. Resources for Feminist Research (HQ1101 .C35x Ref) contains a regular section of special issues and serves to update these volumes.

The first work lists over 3800 entries on women in Brunei, Burma, Indochina, Indonesia, Malaysia, Philippines, Singapore, Thailand and Southeast Asia in general. Unlike Sakala's work this is not restricted to English language materials. Covers works in Malay, Indonesian, Dutch, French and English. Cites books, documents, government publications, pamphlets, reports, mimeographed papers, theses, academic exercises, articles, book chapters and conference papers. Classified arrangement; first by subject category and then subdivided by country. No annotations. Author index. Sakala's work is divided into two parts: (1) Published Resources (the major section of over 400 pages) and (2) Libraries, Archives and Other Local Resources (ca. 50 pages). Part one covers 4600 English language materials from late eighteenth century to mid-1979 on women in India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka and Nepal. Includes books, book segments, articles, serials, dissertations, films and recordings. Entries are mostly annotated and are arranged according to the topical "outline of the headings" at the beginning of the text. Part two reports on the major collections, archives and records of women's organizations in the above-mentioned countries and England. Author and subject indexes.

Title is misleading as the first part of the bibliography actually covers the subjects of women in general for that period and not specifically the literary woman. The second part is devoted to works on literature and is divided by genre. It contains subsections for six major male novelists (Cleland, Defoe, Fielding, Richardson, Smollett and Sterne) listing critical studies of their female characters and works describing their influence and relationships to women and women writers. Myers, Carol Fairbanks. Women in Literature: Criticism of the Seventies. Metuchen, N. J., Scarecrow Press, 1976.
Fairbanks, Carol. More Women in Literature: Criticism of the Seventies. Metuchen, N. J., Scarecrow Press, 1979.
Both volumes list mainly English language books, periodical articles and dissertations on female characters in literature and on women writers of all times and countries. The major part of each volume is devoted to references about individual authors, with the entries alphabetically arranged by writer. A short section of each is a general bibliography providing background works for the study of women in literature, arranged alphabetically by the author of the critical work cited, but no subject approach. The first work covers some 300 writers and lists publications from 1970 through Spring 1975; the second work covers about 1000 writers and cites publications from 1970 through 1977. Only the first bibliography has an index and it is confined to critics and editors. Neither work is annotated.

White, Barbara Anne. American Women Writers: An Annotated Bibliography of Criticism. New York, Garland, 1977.

Unlike Myers' bibliographies which mainly cite published criticism of individual women writers and female characters in literature, White treats published criticism relating to groups of women writers (3 or more writers) and to women writers as a distinct group. For the most part it is limited to works on American writers that were published in the United States from 1830 to 1975, including occasional U.K. works as well as the odd item published in 1976 and 1977. Contains over 400 annotated entries for books, articles, chapters, and introductions to critical materials. Excludes newspapers (except for the magazine sections) and dissertations. Arranged under such headings as Biography; Literary History; Feminine Sensibility; and Phallic Criticism. Ends with an index to critics and editors but lacks a subject index and has no index to the authors mentioned in the citations.

Women and Literature Collective. Women and Literature: An Annotated Bibliography of Women Writers. 3d ed. Cambridge, Mass., The Collective, c1976.

Compiled to promote an awareness of women authors and women's experiences through literature from a feminist perspective. Over 800 entries usefully arranged by country and period (Pre-19th century to Contemporary), with author and subject indexes at the back. Restricted to English language works. Deals with fiction and other forms of expressive prose but excludes popular or genre writers like Pearl Buck and Daphne du Maurier. Annotations are generally evaluative, giving brief biographical information for the authors and a plot summary.
